1. This is an application for quashing an order issuing process under Section 156(3) of Cr.P.C. It is sought to be argued that the Apex Court has held that the bank has a right to re-possess a vehicle in case instalment is not paid. The question as to whether in fact instalment is not paid after following the procedure, is the matter that can be investigated. The applicants have already obtained anticipatory bail. The grievance is made that the applicants have been harassed by the police. It is noticed that case of this sort is normally based upon documentary evidence. Police may call upon the applicants on any particular date in writing and should also ask them to produce whatever documents they required relating to the transaction. Advocate for the applicants states that if they call upon, they will attend the concerned police station with all the necessary documents. With these directions, application is disposed of.
